

Robeco QI Dynamic High Yield IH EUR

Robeco QI Dynamic High Yield is an actively managed fund that aims to provide long-term capital growth and offers diversified exposure to the global high yield corporate bond market, by investing primarily in CDS index derivatives. The positions in these instruments are based on quantitative models. The performance is model-driven by taking active beta and duration positions to decrease or increase the exposures towards the high-yield and rates markets within pre-defined risk limits.

Sustainability profile

ESG Target

Performance

Indexed value (until 31-08-2025) - Source: Robeco

Performance

Based on transaction prices, the fund's return was 0.60%.

The fund's gross return lagged the high yield cash bond market index by -0.24%. All active positions detracted over the month. The combined return of investing in CDS indices and government bonds slightly outperformed the return of high yield cash bonds. In the long run, we do not expect structural return differences between CDS indices and bonds.

Portfolio changes

The positions of the fund are fully determined by the outcomes of our proprietary credit beta and duration models. The fund's beta position switched to an overweight position, as the macro and valuation variables both improved and credit momentum remained strongly positive. The region allocation remained overweight in Europe and underweight in the US, based on the relation valuation. The underweight duration positions in the US and Germany were closed during the month as government bond momentum turned neutral.

Market development

The global high yield bond spread tightened slightly by -3 bps. The US CDX High Yield Index tightened by -2 bps, while the European iTraxx Crossover remained at the same level. So, the US outperformed Europe. The global CDS index return was 0.20% and the underlying government bonds contributed 0.71%. Therefore, the combined return of investing in CDS indices and government bonds was 0.91% this month, slightly outperforming the 0.88% return of the high yield cash bond index. Global equity returns were positive, though, led by strong returns in the US, while European equities were mixed. Government bond markets also diverged posting positive returns for US Treasuries, while yields rose somewhat in Europe. Weak US labor market data explains most of the strong returns of US Treasuries. Two-year US yields declined strongly as a September rate cut is now seen as nearly certain; 30-year US yields rose slightly as the market is getting increasingly worried about the Fed's independence. The ECB is expected to be on hold for the time being. Oil prices declined, with Brent falling from USD 70 to USD 67, driven by OPEC+ announcing a full unwind of voluntary output cuts.

Expectation of fund manager

The positions of the fund are fully determined by the outcomes of our proprietary models. At the end of the month, the fund had an overweight credit beta position. The region allocation position was overweight in Europe and underweight in the US. The fund had no active duration positions.

Currency policy

Currency risks are hedged.

Risk management

The investment strategy of the fund aims to outperform its 100% exposure to high yield corporates by taking active beta positions based on Robeco's quantitative market timing model. These active positions are set to always meet the predefined guidelines. As the investment exposure of the fund is obtained to a material degree through derivatives, it is important to manage counterparty risk. Therefore the credit quality of the counterparties is monitored and collateral is exchanged on a daily basis to reflect market movements in the value of the instruments. The predefined guidelines also restrict the leverage exposure of derivatives on a fund level and the currency exposure as described in the prospectus.

Dividend policy

All income earned will be accumulated and not be distributed as dividend. Therefore the entire return is reflected in the share price development.
